

Corporate Restructuring

Occasionally businesses find that they need to restructure their operations, whether as a result of financial distress, the changing nature of their business or the desire to take advantage of other opportunities. Ireland Stapleton's corporate attorneys have experience helping publically and privately-held companies develop innovative and effective strategies to accomplish their goals. Whether companies merge their operations, sell a division of their enterprise or choose to engage in complicated restructurings of their international and domestic affiliated entities, our team works with them through the entire process to help achieve their goals.
