Katherine Struthers is an attorney in Ireland Stapleton's litigation and real estate practice groups. In her practice, she represents clients in commercial litigation matters involving construction defects, mechanics' liens, employment law, contract disputes, easements, land use, and matters specific to homeowner associations. She is dedicated to providing clients with efficient, pragmatic, and results-oriented legal advice.

Prior to joining Ireland Stapleton, Katherine worked as an attorney in Crested Butte, Colorado. While in law school, she clerked for multiple Denver District Court judges, including the Honorable Elizabeth Starrs and the Honorable Jill Dorancy. Also, while in law school, she served as a legal intern in Colorado's 5th Judicial District Attorney's Office, interned for the Environmental Defense Fund, served as a law clerk for the U.S. Department of Justice's Environment and Natural Resources Division, and clerked for Judge David Goldberg in the 2nd Judicial District. Before pursuing a career in law, Katherine worked as an operations support officer for the Defense Attaché Service in Washington D.C. and provided in-the-field support to U.S. Defense Attaché Offices in U.S. Embassies in West Africa.
