

Transmissions

Transmission affects all sectors of energy development and operations. For the oil and gas industry, this often means pipelines. Ireland Stapleton attorneys help our clients ensure that the oil and gas they produce have access to markets. The Firm has represented landowners with properties actually or proposed to be encumbered by pipelines and electric transmission facilities. Further, our attorneys have experience with the legal issues surrounding the siting and construction of transmission lines, including dealings with federal financing, environmental approvals, franchise agreements, county, and state regulatory authorities, and the application of eminent domain.